

Turtlegrass is one of seven types of seagrass which grows in Florida's shallow estuaries. Seagrass is the lawn of the sea. Their root systems keep waters clear by holding soil in place. These underwater plants also provide food and cover for marine animals, especially young fish and crabs.